

Quality Policy

Merefields Electronics fully recognise that, as a business, we need to consistently meet the expectations of our customers our future success depends entirely upon the products and services we supply.

We have a long-established Quality Management System based on ISO9001 and understand that our actions and those of our suppliers affect both our customers and our organisation.

Our many years of operation in the electronics industry has enabled us to establish a working model that helps purchasers to safely buy electronic components in today's volatile market. We work with a core of preferred suppliers and these are continuously reviewed and evaluated to improve our performance and to exceed our customer's expectations.

We believe that it is of paramount importance that as a company, Merefields Electronics are recognised for their quality in all aspects of the way we conduct our business. We regularly review our quality policy, part of which is to evaluate employees performance and satisfaction and to take on board feedback from within under an ethos of continual improvement.

November 2021

